

Curriculum Vitae

Personal Profile

Dr. Victoria A. Jideani was a preeminent Full Professor of Food Science and Technology at the Cape Peninsula University of Technology (CPUT), South Africa. Over a distinguished four-decade career spanning the United Kingdom, Botswana, and South Africa, she has emerged as a global authority in innovative product development. Her work is defined by the strategic valorization of underutilized African crops, specifically Bambara groundnut, Acha, and Pearl Millet, transitioning these climate-smart grains from subsistence staples into commercializeable functional foods that drive the regional bioeconomy. An NRF C2-rated researcher, Dr. Jideani bridges the gap between high-level scholarly inquiry and industrial application. Her pioneering research in food rheology and biopolymers has led to the development of plant-based dairy alternatives, probiotic beverages, and the patented extraction of specialized dietary fibers, probiotic beverage and starch-fiber nanocomposite. As a strategist in education, she has successfully mentored 20 Master's and 7 Doctoral graduates and over 100 scientific publications, utilizing digital pedagogy and the Revised Bloom's Taxonomy to align academic outcomes with the technical demands of the global food industry. Her career represents a synthesis of technical excellence and a transformative vision for African food security.

Dr Victoria Jideani creates intelligent workflows for HACCP/FSMS applications, ingredient selection, and compliance automation by fusing in-depth knowledge of food science with useful AI applications. She is an expert at transforming complex technical and regulatory requirements into guided, step-by-step experiences for small food businesses and researchers using language models, agentic AI, and no-code/low-code automation. She is positioned as a domain expert who can design and deliver AI-augmented tools, rather than just prototype models, because of her work in AI-assisted document intelligence, smart monitoring and anomaly alerting, domain-specific Natural Language Processing for technical text, and AI-driven content and food visual creation.
